

'An Adsummonites Dream,' a sketch of a new bug (Kemble), his maiden aunt (C. W. Raeburn) and Bulldozer, a head monitor (D. A. Raeburn), at 'a tea-place near Godalming,' was full of well-written dialogue and cleverly conceived situation. C. W. Raeburn acted with immense verve and no little skill. 'In the Mood,' a seriously sentimental interlude played by Chevis, was also well conceived, though extremely difficult to put across successfully in the middle of such a light bill of fare. It is to the credit of Chevis that he succeeded in holding the attention of the audience by his obvious sincerity.

Meanwhile the entertainment had been interrupted by the intrusion of a certain Colonel Sir Pompét ffolliott-Brompton (Waddell), who delivered a very remarkable lecture on military affairs. Over this tour de force, for it was nothing less, it is impossible not to enthuse. The shafts of satire were polished and pointed, yet never barbed. The voice, the little mannerisms, the fatuous inconsequentialities, were all studied to perfection. This was, in truth, 'very excellent fooling.'

The Revue as a whole was marked by spontaneity and liveliness. If the chief honours went to Waddell, the two Raeburns, the Mavroleon brothers and to a lesser extent Wackerbarth, (who had no part in which he could do himself justice), Kemble and Chevis, all showed considerable versatility and ability, whilst Moy compered the show with a delightfully unexpected suavity. To Messrs. Wackerbarth, Moy and Darvall, who staged and produced the Revue, very high praise is due for a thoroughly enjoyable evening.

CHARTERHOUSE CONSERVATIVE SOCIETY

When we discovered in the course of an unsatisfactory debate last quarter that an unpleasantly large minority of the School were not Conservatives and that a majority of those who professed to be Conservatives did not understand the principles and aims they accepted, we decided to form a Conservative Society which should further the Conservative cause by means of lectures, debates and any other means practicable. We wrote to the headquarters of the Conservative and Unionist Parties and received a most gratifying reply, wishing us success and stating that, so far as was known, this was the first occasion such a society has been formed at a public school.

We have at the moment several vacancies on the Committee and can give ordinary membership to an almost unlimited number. Those who are interested and who can accept, in the main, the Conservative beliefs should apply to the Chairman, Mr Rees-Mogg, to the Vice-Chairman, Mr Reiss, or to Mr Raven. We shall hold open meetings, among which we hope to include lectures by prominent Conservatives, but we shall also hold private meetings, apart from those which are purely committee meetings, to which members of the Society only will be invited.

At Home. May 13th. Drawn.

Runs were hard to obtain off the good bowling of R. A. Shaddick and his colleagues. Cranstoun and Funnell made a timely stand however, and the total was not unduly small. Rain eventually spoiled what might have been a very interesting match.

CHARTERHOUSE v R.A.C. O.C.T.U., SANDHURST

At Home. May 20th. Drawn.

For Charterhouse, Carter, May and Cranstoun batted well against some steady bowling. The O.C.T.U., although they started well, were always behind the clock, and the guileful Rimell mi. soon claimed his victims. With the remainder of the bowling of a good length, and the fielding of a high standard, the O.C.T.U. were lucky to escape defeat.

CHARTERHOUSE v LONDON FIRE SERVICE

At Home. May 23rd. Lost by 30 runs.

The Charterhouse bowling was accurate and the London Fire Service, although a strong side, took 3½ hours to make their runs. Although Rimell mi. and May batted well, runs were coming too slowly and the spasmodic attempts to increase the rate of scoring merely shortened the innings.

CHARTERHOUSE v WELLINGTON

Away. May 27th. Lost by 44 runs.

In this match little good cricket was seen, probably because many of the players were playing in their first

School match. The Charterhouse fielding was untidy and uncertain, which influenced the result more than any other factor, for although Wellington fielded keenly and well, they were not superior in the other departments of the game.

The Wellington innings began slowly against the steady bowling of Ashley and Dix-Perkin, but by one o'clock Tod and Archibald seemed to have collared the bowling and were taking full advantage of some slack fielding and inaccurate deliveries. However, Ashley, coming on for his third spell, dismissed Archibald and, with the last ball before lunch, Tod too, with the score at 132 for 5. Tod had played well for his side and had punished every loose ball severely.

After lunch a curiously unorthodox innings by Playfair produced 44 runs, but apart from a couple of good catches by Bishop at cover, nothing further of note occurred in the Wellington innings which closed at 3.10 p.m. Ashley, in spite of the heat, kept perfect length and control and his figures, 4 for 28 in 20 overs, reveal his consistency.

Charterhouse should have got the runs, but a brilliant catch in the slips dismissed Carter, and May was soon snapped up in a similar manner. The two Rimells had a typical stand with plenty of short runs interspersed with some glorious shots by Rimell ma., who hit three perfect boundaries in his 17 runs. Walters, who was sixth out at 112, had batted steadily with Cranstoun, and when Ashley went in about 5.45 with the desire to turn the game round, Cranstoun seemed set and chances of victory were even. However, a gallant hit by the captain was caught on the boundary and all hopes faded. Funnell and Cranstoun were soon back in the pavilion and a bright knock by Day rounded off the match.

CHARTERHOUSE v TONBRIDGE

At Home. June 6th. Won by 106 runs.

In spite of the opening of the Second Front, Tonbridge were able to make the cross-country journey to Charterhouse and the match began at 12.15. Charterhouse batted first, and although Funnell was soon out, Popplewell and Carter scored fairly fast and at lunch Carter and May were well set with the score at 63 for 2 wickets.

After lunch these two batted briskly until at 89 Carter, who had played a lively and extremely useful innings, 55 out of 89, was caught on the boundary. It was obviously necessary to score runs quickly, because stumps were to be drawn at 6.30. May continued his good work, helped largely by the younger Rimell. Although not always happy with the ball just outside the off-stump, May was driving beautifully anything just over a good length and Rimell mi. was forcing the ball away on every possible occasion.

With May out at 156 and five wickets down, Cranstoun and Rimell mi. began to take justifiable risks, so that Ashley could declare at the earliest possible moment. Eventually the innings was declared closed at 3.45 with 210 runs on the board for 8 wickets. Tonbridge, being left about 2½ hours to get the runs, had the usual 60 minutes' batting before tea and scored about 50 runs for the loss of three wickets. This meant that Tonbridge had the unenviable task of getting more than 150 runs after tea in about an hour and a quarter with seven wickets in hand.

Marriott and Alexander batted confidently but were dismissed by Rimell mi., who was fighting the ball exceptionally well. Then Smith and Alexander had an entertaining stand until the former, who had hit a good six off Rimell mi., was caught on the boundary at 94. The rest of the Tonbridge side gave little trouble and the match, which at 6 p.m. looked like being a draw, was finished at 6.15, thanks to some good bowling captaincy by Ashley and a successful over by Funnell.

For Charterhouse, Carter, May and Rimell mi. batted at their best and put their side in a winning position. The bowling of Ashley and Rimell mi. and two good catches by Carter settled the issue.

On a difficult wicket Ashley, making the ball leave the batsmen, met with considerable success. Col. Cartwright alone showed confidence. Carter played an excellent

CHARTERHOUSE v ETON

Away. June 13th. Won by 4 wickets.

This was the first victory over Eton since 1939 when Charterhouse, scoring 302 by three o'clock, succeeded in dismissing the whole Eton side for 178. Since then several exciting matches have been played; and this wartime match had its thrilling moments in spite of the low scores on both sides.

Overnight rain, which lasted till eleven o'clock, had made the pitch and outfield soft and wet, so the Eton captain, on winning the toss, decided rightly to bat. His opening pair, however, although batting stylishly, did not attempt to attack the bowling while the ball was wet and difficult to hold. These were fatal tactics: for the sun, once it began to dry the pitch, made it more and more difficult every minute. Credit must of course be given to Ashley and Day, who kept a steady length under these conditions. In fact, when Day was replaced by Rimell mi. he had bowled six overs with a wettish ball and only 10 runs had been scored off him.

The wicket now suited Rimell's spinners. In his first over, Blake was 1-b-w; in his second, Gardiner-Hill was out in a peculiar manner, the wicket-keeper diving between the batman's legs and the bat to catch the ball just before it reached the ground!

Then White was brilliantly caught and bowled by Ashley, making the score after nearly an hour's play 22 for three. When the players went in to lunch this total had been doubled, thanks to some bright hitting by the Hely-Hutchinsons.

After lunch the wicket appeared to help the bowlers, especially Rimell mi., who, flighting and spinning the ball cleverly, baffled the majority of the Etonians. At the other end Ashley was bowling with venom and accuracy and, faced by this relentless double attack, the batsmen never felt really comfortable. At three o'clock the score was only 83 with seven wickets down. A splendid hit for six by Stewart-Grey was the only incident worth recording in the rest of the Eton innings.

In reply to the modest score of 98, Charterhouse lost three men for 19, but by dint of careful play the two youngest members of the team, Rimell mi. and May, pulled the game round and at tea-time, with the scoreboard showing 35 for three, the game was in an interesting stage.

Fortunately there was not an early wicket after tea and 48 was reached without further loss. Then Rimell ma. took his brother's place and a beautiful lofty hit for six off the first ball he received showed that he and Charterhouse were determined to win. And his stirring innings, in which he smacked every loose ball with considerable vigour and confidence, really decided the issue. May was run out at 59 after making a valuable contribution and Cranstoun partnered Rimell ma. These two took the score to 86 when Eton's hopes were raised by the dismissal of Rimell ma., only to be lowered immediately by four byes which sent the total bouncing up to 90! In spite of some excellent ground fielding the remaining few runs were obtained comfortably by Walters and Cranstoun.

But the victory was really due to the Carthusian bowlers. Ashley's strenuous work is best judged by his analysis; except for the last over before lunch, he bowled throughout the innings, taking four wickets for 24 runs in 22 overs, an astounding performance under such conditions. Rimell mi. took six Eton wickets for 57 runs, one of his best and most valuable achievements in a match of this importance. His brother had a great day; besides his gallant knock, he kept magnificently, allowing only one bye.

CHARTERHOUSE v HARROW

At Home. June 24th.

Drawn.

The weather and pitch were all that could be desired when Charterhouse began their innings at 11.50, but another bad start has to be recorded; for both Funnell and Carter were out with only 13 runs scored! Walters, promoted in the batting order, came in to play one of his best innings, while May, batting in his own inimitable style, forcing the ball away cleverly on the leg side, helped him so adequately that 70 runs were added in 45 minutes.

Even when Walters was out and Rimell mi. came in, the rate of scoring increased, and at one o'clock the spectators clapped the 'hundred up' and May's fifty. Though trying hard, the Harrovians could not stop the fluency with which these two young batsmen scored. It was a delightful exhibition of batting. Once or twice every over the ball sped swiftly across Green to the boundary, vainly chased by some luckless Harrovian. The fielders must surely have welcomed lunch at 1.25, when the score was 150 for three wickets after 95 minutes' play.

May and Rimell mi. continued to bat well after the interval and May went on to complete his first century for Charterhouse—an entertaining innings which will long be remembered by those who saw it. Incidentally his partnership with Rimell mi. had also realized 100. Soon afterwards May was caught in the slips but with the total already at 197, Charterhouse were in a winning position.

Then, however, came a collapse, an anti-climax, as it were, to the brilliant performances of Walters, Rimell mi. and May. Rimell did, indeed, stay a little longer, but all the rest of the side, except Bishop, were sent back to the Pavilion at regular and short intervals. Responsibility for this was shared by the two Harrovian bowlers, McCorquodale and McClean, who bowled with great spirit and energy despite hot gruelling spells on the sun-baked Green.

Harrow were eventually set a stiff but not impossible task, considering the fast wicket and outfield. Unfortunately, Harrow's chances of victory were dissipated in the usual hour's play before tea. A score of 42 for two was not good enough, for it meant that, with eight wickets in hand, 210 runs were needed in about an hour and three-quarters.

Could Charterhouse, on the other hand, dismiss Harrow in the time available on such a good wicket? Unhappily, although bowling an immaculate length, Ashley, injured a day or two previously, was not as deadly as usual: although he kept the runs down, he could not take the much needed wickets. Whitby, a young newcomer to the side, bowled with spirit however, and met with fair success, taking three wickets for 30 runs.

At 5.45, that is, with an hour and a quarter left for play, five Harrovians were out for 74 runs and victory for Charterhouse seemed a probability. At this juncture Jackson and Spring-Rice became associated and played with such confidence against the change bowlers that sixty good runs were put on before the Rimell mi. combination parted them an hour later. Another quick wicket raised hopes which did not materialize, however, and the match ended in a rather tame draw.

The chief features of the match were May's century and his partnership with Rimell mi. These two put Charterhouse in a winning position, but the rest of the side failed to take the fullest advantage of their efforts. For Harrow, McCorquodale's fast bowling and Jackson's courageous innings deserve pride of place.

CHARTERHOUSE v BRADFIELD

At Home. June 27th.

Won by 8 wickets.

Once again Ashley and Rimell mi. wrought havoc on a wet wicket. Between showers, the Bradfield batsmen fared badly against Ashley, who cut the ball appreciably, and after Hooper had been caught by Bishop, no one put up any resistance to speak of. Rimell mi. began by bowling Wilson with a very good one, and considering the slowness of the pitch kept the batsmen remarkably subdued. Bradfield were finally dismissed for 61.

Charterhouse began their innings briskly, Carter hitting very hard to leg, and although Stevenson took two quick wickets, May and Carter had no difficulty in hitting off the runs before tea. After tea Carter reached his fifty; his was undoubtedly the best innings of the match, and he made some fine shots, including a six to fine leg.

CHARTERHOUSE v OLD CARTHUSIANS

July 1st. Won by 127 runs.

Although the wicket was easy the Charterhouse batting was not so good as usual and Carter was the only one of the early batsmen who showed complete confidence, although Walters and Rimell ma. made some good shots. Whitby, who batted extremely well, helped by Ashley, brought the score into the realms of respectability.

Fears that this score would prove insufficient were unfounded, for Day and Ashley had no difficulty in disposing of the O.Cs, who were obviously very short of practice.

HOCKEY

CHARTERHOUSE v OLD CARTHUSIANS

At Home. March 18th.

Drawn 2—2.

(Godden, Dix-Perkin)

This match was played under ideal conditions, and was very much enjoyed by all. E. C. Dalgety had got together a very good team which included three University players as well as the cream of the elevens of previous years. The game opened with Charterhouse very much on the defensive, and there were some critical moments. Dalgety opened the scoring for the O.Cs with a finely placed shot. Charterhouse then settled down to the attack, and the forwards made some good movements, but Evans at centre-half, always very much in the lime-light, broke up their attacks time and time again. Dalgety shot again, and the ball unluckily slipped under Carter's foot into the goal, but Godden soon replied for Charterhouse just before half-time with a shot which gave Erulkar no chance.

The second half was uneventful except for a good goal by Dix-Perkin, who put in a first-time shot from the edge of the circle. After this the game became scrappy, and neither side really looked like scoring.

For the O.Cs Dalgety played a fine game and was always dangerous. Watson, Evans and Drury all played well. For Charterhouse Walters worked hard, and Ashley did well at left-back; Godden, too, tried hard. There was constant good humour on both sides; and Dalgety must be thanked both for getting together a side and for an excellent game.
