SCHOOL SOCIETIES AND ENTERTAINMENTS

HOUSE SINGING

The readers of this review will be of two classes: those for whom it will be a melancholy exhumation, and those for whom it will be a pleasant retrospect. Of the latter the first should deservedly be Pageites, Saunderites and Verites. From Pageites we have grown to expect a superlative response to habitually superlative training, and their performance of the Agincourt song, with its triumphant cry of mediæval chivalry, as well as their robust unison song, came well up to previous standards. Saunderites' 'Just as the Tide was Flowing' upheld the best traditions of that house, of our own Vaughan Williams and of English vocal music in general. Their unison song, too, deserves praise, particularly for its three gallant soloists. Verites, placed third by the outspoken Miss Chesterfield, showed an equally intelligent response to sound training.

Among the rest, as agreed in the rules, we will not discriminate; many of them showed patches of real Art, as Bodeites, whose control of volume was so impressive, and Hodgsonites, whose Sumer is Icumen in was a pleasant moment, although the important pedal bass was somewhat lacking. Robinites competed with one of the happiest of Mr. Scott's works, now expected features of these competitions and surely deserving of more than the one brief performance which they usually enjoy.

Of the less fortunate competitors one house at least may find the following quotation from 'As You Like It' relevant (if slightly distorted):

JUDGE: Truly, young gentleman, though there was no great matter in the ditty, yet the note was very untuneable.
LEFT-HANDED CONDUCTOR: You are deceived, madam; we kept time, we lost not our time.

JUDGE: By my troth yes; I count it but time lost to hear such a foolish song. God be wi' you; and God mend your voices!

We should like to thank Miss Chesterfield for the spirited and entertaining way in which she performed her function, for the very sound advice which she lavished on us and for the trouble she took in coming down for the occasion.

O.C. DINNER AT BARI

Major A. C. Blair (W) sends an account of an O.C. Dinner held at Bari, Italy, on July 22nd. The appropriate toasts were duly honoured, and he as dinner secretary was instructed to convey to Charterhouse the good wishes of all present. These were :—

Capt. A. A. Birch, R.A. (G '35-'40); Major A. C. Blair, R.A. (W '21-'26); Capt. R. L. Brignall, Intelligence Corps (L '26-'30); Lieut.-Col. J. R. Cochrane, R.A. (L '18-'22); Capt. D. L. G. Joseph, R. Sigs. (V '09-'14); Lieut. J. R. Meredith Davies, Welsh Guards (G '35-'38); Lieut. E. F.

CHARTERHOUSE v CRANLEIGH

At Home. July 8th. Won by 4 wickets.

Despite the low scoring, this was a splendid match with plenty of good cricket.

With a pitch drying in patches Ashley decided to put Cranleigh in to bat. The weather was doubtful: if it kept fine the wicket would be dry after lunch, whereas if more rain came a wet wicket would be easier to play on than the patchy one about to be used.

Cranleigh made a poor start, losing three wickets for 13 runs and, in spite of some gallant batting by Bennett, Clark and Fairbanks, they never really recovered. All the same it was good to see their batsmen play Rimell mi. in the orthodox fashion—even Clark, a smallish fifteen-year-old, was not afraid to move down the wicket and drive the ball along the ground. Rimell's average of one wicket for 31 in five overs shows how summarily he was treated—not that he was bowling badly; the fact was, he was not allowed to bowl a length. Ashley, however, was a different proposition for our visitors. The drying wicket helped him a little, it is true, but he bowled with exceptional accuracy and skill, making the ball move across from the leg to the off after pitching. His eight wickets for 30 was his best performance of the season. Day also bowled well and kept down the runs, as his average bears witness: while Whitby was treated with considerable respect.

Faced with the small total of 86, Charterhouse should have won very comfortably, but the bowling of Fairbanks and Bennett made the issue doubtful. Although Popplewell and Walters were soon out, one thought that May would remain with Carter, who was batting very soundly and in his best form, until the match was won. But no. After scoring nine he was clean bowled by Fairbanks, who created a further sensation by dismissing Rimell mi. a few minutes later. The score was now 34 for 5 and Charterhouse were in trouble.

It was at this stage that Rimell ma. came in to join Carter. These two proceeded to give an exhibition of running between the wickets which would have pleased even the top-hatted critics at Lord's! They stole singles, they ran three where there should have been only two, and four where there should have been three, and all with mature judgment and without any nerve-racking hesitation and despite the excellent bowling and fielding of the Cranleigh eleven. This heartening display of real cricket soon brought victory within reach—and, in fact, although Carter was l-b-w to a slow bowler at 58, and Cranstoun only scored a single, Bishop carried on the good work with Rimell ma. until the necessary runs were obtained.

Once again Carter and Rimell ma. had played well in a crisis and incidentally had justified Ashley's decision not to bat first!

CHARTERHOUSE v M.C.C.

At Home. July 13th. Drawn.

Whether or not the date had anything to do with it, proceedings opened inauspiciously enough. May was stopping out and Carter was hit very hard in the face by a ball while practising in a net. He very bravely decided to bat but was rewarded by seeing four of his partners leave before 25 was up. However, Rimell mi. looked extremely safe and Carter was able to reach a well deserved fifty before rain stopped play.

CHARTERHOUSE v GUILDFORD WANDERERS

At Home. July 15th. Won by 9 wickets.

Our opponents batted first on a pitch that should have proved easy. There was little pace in it, though Day succeeded in baffling several of the batsmen with his speed, and not enough stickiness for Rimell mi.'s slow off-spins to take effect. However, a combination of two, with Rimell mi. flighting the ball cleverly, and Ashley keeping a steady length, succeeded in dismissing our opponents in a surprisingly short space of time. Set only 62 to make an easy wicket, it was not surprising that we beat them with the loss of only one wicket. But nevertheless a fine, forcing innings by Fenwick, assisted by Whitby, definitely justified the inclusion of them both in the team, and showed Whitby to have an excellent second string to his bow.

CHARTERHOUSE v R.A.S.C.

At Home. July 22nd. Lost by 6 wickets.

In this match the School had the privilege of seeing a beautiful display of wicket-keeping by Evans, of Kent, whom many expect to be the next England wicket-keeper: they were also lucky enough to get him out cheaply by a good catch at long-leg off a very bad ball. For the rest the batting on a wicket that was slow, but not really difficult, was disappointing, though Capt. Hilder has bowled out better sides in his day. After a total of 53 only an exceptional piece of bowling by Ashley could have brought victory, but our opponents were rather more experienced than some sides we played, and never looked in serious danger.

Bodeites, 124 (J. E. Gammon 26, R. W. Reiss 24, M. C. W. Wildy 24; J. B. R. Ashley 6 for 39).

FINAL

Daviesites beat Weekites by 84 runs.

Daviesites won the toss and elected to bat on a plumb wicket. Jory was soon out, but Lloyd stayed with Funnell, who looked very safe; but at 46, Funnell misjudged a ball from Rimell mi. and was out caught and bowled. Hennessy was bowled in the same over. At this point, with the score at 48 for 3, Ashley came in and began to score very fast, mostly off Williams ma. At 38, Ashley was dropped off a difficult catch to deep mid-off. Apart from this lapse he gave a very forceful display, scoring fast all round the wicket. At 148 Lloyd, who had stayed in nearly two hours and had made an extremely useful 26, was caught off Rimell mi.

Ashley supported now by Gemmel, was still hitting hard and he reached his hundred with a great pull. He was out two balls later, caught at mid-off off Williams ma.

It was a magnificent and powerful innings. He had pulled the game round when Daviesites urgently needed runs. He scored 102 out of 132 in 100 minutes, and Daviesites were now in a very favourable position with the score at 180 for 5.

Gemmel batted very soundly for 24, but he could find no supporters in the tail, who all fell victims to Williams ma., a slow left-hand bowler. Daviesites were all out at 5.15 for 211. Rimell mi. was the best Weekite bowler, and the only one to keep a consistent length, although Williams ma. was the more successful. Rimell mi. was unfortunate in having Ashley dropped in the deep and he bowled very steadily.

Weekites opened with 85 minutes' play left on Tuesday. Ashley had Savill l-b-w in his second over, but Rimell ma. and Williams ma. scored at a good rate. Williams was caught at short square leg off Hennessy at 61, and Rimell mi. joined his brother. Both looked very safe and Rimell ma. reached his 50 after an hour. But he was very well caught by Ray at short-leg off Ashley. Godden was out on the last ball of the same over and Rodd in Ashley's next over. When stumps were drawn at 7, the Weekite score was 94 for 5, Rimell mi. 14 not out. With the dismissal of Rimell ma. Weekites had only a slender chance.

Play was resumed at 5.30 on Wednesday. Ashley bowled Macdonald with his first ball. At 105, Rimell mi. was brilliantly run out by Ashley for 24 runs. The game was virtually over. Apart from a bright knock of 11 runs by Strang, all scored in one over, the Weekite tail offered no resistance and the innings closed at 127.

The result was largely due to Ashley, who made half the runs and took six wickets. It was a great triumph for Daviesites, who had not won the cup since 1912. The fielding on both sides was keen, but scrappy at times. Daviesites were easily the better bowling side and once Rimell ma. was out, there was little doubt about the result.

CRICKET, 1944

The 1944 cricket eleven was a good wartime side with a creditable record in School matches for, although losing to Wellington early in the season and drawing later on with Harrow, it won clear-cut victories against Eton, Tonbridge, Bradfield and Cranleigh.

Beginning the season with four old colours in addition to himself, Ashley soon assembled the majority of the eleven. Day and Walters had already appeared occasionally in 1943 and with the youthful May batting well and Cranstoun putting up satisfactory all-round performances only two places remained vacant, one being the unenviable position of an opening bat, the other to be filled, if possible, by a successful all-rounder. Funnell seemed to be the ideal candidate for the first but, unfortunately, a serious 'bad patch' caused him to give way to Fenwick, while Whitby, a fifteen-year-old new boy, secured the other.

The strength of the side lay in the accurate and effective bowling combination of Ashley, Day and Rimell mi. So efficient, indeed, was this trio that, for many matches, no one else was called upon to bowl for more than two or three overs. Whitby came in against Harrow because Ashley was injured, and bowled so well that he kept his place for the remainder of the season. The splendid help given to the bowlers by Rimell ma., the wicket-keeper, should not be forgotten.

Ashley was rewarded for his brilliant work (46 wickets at 7 runs apiece!) by being selected to play for the Rest at Lord's. In the middle of the season he developed, thanks to Geary's advice, from a fastish good-length bowler into an accurate medium paced leg-break bowler. The change soon had disastrous effects on opposing teams. He took seven wickets for 14 against the Grasshoppers, four for 24 at Eton, five for 21 against Bradfield, four for 12 against the O.Cs, eight for 30 against Cranleigh and, if he had been fit enough to bowl his best, a different result would certainly have been achieved in the Harrow match.

Rimell mi. was a perfect foil to Ashley and his slow flighted off-breaks caused havoc on several occasions, particularly at Eton, where he took six wickets for 57, and in the Tonbridge match, when he took four for 29.

Day, a very useful opening bowler, could not only keep the runs down but was always likely to get an early wicket or two with a new ball. His workmanlike tally of 24 wickets includes four for 38 at Wellington and five for 10 against the Old Carthusians XI.

The batting of the side was better than in 1943. Carter fulfilled all expectations and, by the end of the season, had developed into a reliable opening bat. His 55 against Tonbridge ranks as his best innings: although his performances against Bradfield, Cranleigh and the O.Cs were none the less valuable. It will be difficult to fill his place in 1945.

Rimell ma. in form was a joy to watch, for he struck the ball very hard and very often! His priceless 29 at Eton will always be remembered by those who were present.

Rimell mi. had a promising season. As an opening bat or in the middle of the team he acted as a buttress against any collapse. He played with cool confidence and skill in several awkward situations. His 41 against the experienced bowlers of the Fire Service, his 43 against Wellington and his 55 against Harrow, to say nothing of his steady defensive innings at Eton, were all great achievements of which he may be proud.

May, at the age of 14, seemed to be irrepresible. Once he had gained his place in the side, he never looked back, and time after time more than justified his inclusion at such a tender age. His brilliant century against Harrow was, we hope, an earnest of things to come!

Bishop, Cranstoun and Walters were capable of good deeds and proved themselves worthy reserves on more than one occasion. Whitby and Fenwick had few opportunities but they made the most of them. Whitby shapes well on fast wickets but he still has to learn how to play on slow ones. Fenwick, if not elegant, was effective both in attack and defence.

The fielding of the side improved gradually and in July was really worth watching. The running between the wickets by the younger members of the team caused many heart-pangs—it will not always be possible to defeat Eton by four wickets and have two batsmen run out!

Ashley was a successful leader of a successful team—and he would not wish for a better compliment!

CHARTERHOUSE v CHELSEA SEA CADET CORPS

At Home. October 7th.

Drawn 0—0.

Having successfully averted a serious threat from the 58th Training Regiment to bring down a rugger team, Charterhouse eventually took the field against the Sea Cadet Corps who were expecting to play the 2nd XI. Despite this handicap they held Charterhouse to a draw in a goalless game, which showed up the traditional Charterhouse failure to do anything convincing with the ball once it is in the penalty area.

The Charterhouse half-line dominated the opposing forwards, but the attack failed to cohere and never had that extra dash which is so essential in front of goal. The Sea Cadet Corps defence was very steady and refused to be rattled by the frequent attacks of the Charterhouse forwards, who played excellently in mid-field, but who seemed to prefer short passes to those long swinging ones that all defenders fear. The failure of Charterhouse against a side that was undoubtedly weaker was due no doubt to lack of practice. The backs had not yet learned to cover satisfactorily, though their tackling was excellent. But above all they need that extra dash and determination to get to the ball first.

CHARTERHOUSE—G. R. W. Carter; W. N. B. Parker, A. J. Rimell mi.; T. R. F. Fenwick, E. A. Bishop, M. J. Rimell ma.; G. D. Spratt, B. H. Price, P. A. Vlasto, P. S. I. Godden, J. A. N. Pollock.

CHARTERHOUSE v CORINTHIAN CASUALS

At Home. October 14th.

Lost 4—5.

At so early a stage in the season it is not surprising that Charterhouse did not co-operate as a team in a manner compatible with that shown after a few weeks of practice together. Had the team shown its true form the score might have been different.

Played under greasy conditions, with a shower in the second half making things more difficult, the game however displayed a surprising speed, with our opponents, particularly the forwards, showing just that extra quickness which makes all the difference. The centre-forward, who has played many times on our ground, was quick to take advantage of the fact that the backs were not covering sufficiently. By half-time five goals had been slipped through the defence, which was slow to learn its lesson. The Charterhouse forwards, ably assisted by the wing halves, had produced some nice movements but lacked the accuracy needed to finish them off successfully. However, a penalty from Godden gave Charterhouse their second goal in the first half.

In the second half, Charterhouse pulled itself together and began to attack in earnest. Rimell ma. and Godden were co-operating well and there were many chances that should have been taken. However, despite poor shooting, two more goals were added without further reply from our opponents, and it was not without trying that we failed to produce the desired result.

CHARTERHOUSE—G. R. W. Carter; A. M. Cranstoun, A. J. Rimell mi.; T. R. F. Fenwick, E. A. Bishop, M. J. Rimell ma.; E. P. Wilson, B. H. Price, G. D. Spratt, P. S. I. Godden, J. A. N. Pollock.
