

for objects not permanently on exhibition. At the same time it was decided to continue the rearrangement and remounting of the British birds, including the Stafford collection. This has now been completed—except for internal lighting of the cases—and all four walls of the Natural History Section show the birds collected into families in their natural surroundings. The 'properties' are a monument to the skill and ingenuity of the present Curator, Mr. P. J. Mountney, and the backgrounds were in many cases painted by boys in the School. There are still gaps: specimens of Warblers, Housemartins, Sandmartins and Wagtails would be very welcome.

Last quarter Museum was offered, and very gladly accepted, by W. H. Hale (S. 1921-26) the loan of the magnificent collection of eggs of British birds found by his late father, the Rev. J. R. Hale (S. 1888-92), together with four cabinets of British Lepidoptera. The former collection especially calls for a more detailed note. It fills nine large cabinets, with three additional ones of duplicates. Every specimen in it was collected by J. R. Hale (some while he was a boy at Charterhouse), by his sons, W. H. and J. P. R. Hale (S. 1923-28) or by his friends T. P. Aldworth and E. V. Earle. Only three birds regularly nesting in the British Isles are unrepresented—Snow Bunting, Bittern and Montague's Harrier. Especially noteworthy are the eggs of the Hobby, Ducks, Owls, Kentish Plover, Chaffinch, Robin, Crested Tit, Marsh Harrier and Red-necked Philacope. The collection of Lepidoptera is smaller, but includes most of the British butterflies (notably Clouded Yellow, var. Helice, and a genuine English Camberwell Beauty) and the commoner moths. The fender and his brother are the fourth successive generation of Carthusian Hales and the fifth is due at Charterhouse shortly.

Lack of space has made it necessary to limit future additions to the Natural History section to British specimens, with the possible exception of the completion of the large collection of heads of African game given by Dr. Percy Rendall.

In the Archæological Section Professor Beazley has recently identified a Greek Calyx (bought by the Rev. G. S. Davies) as the work of the potter Hieron and the painter Makron. There is great congestion in this section also, but it is hoped that the pictures, at present most inadequately shown, may in not too distant future join last quarter's munificent gift of over fifty paintings made to Charterhouse by W. V. Paterson (g. 1874-5) in a separate Art Gallery.

The many other recent gifts cannot be mentioned here. They are duly recorded in the book kept for the purpose in Museum.

The Boyd Neel string orchestra played in Hall on Sunday, October 14th.

CRICKET

CHARTERHOUSE v GUILDFORD

At Home. June 14th.

Drawn.

Winning the toss, Charterhouse went in to bat, and, though Raven was out for 8, Spargo and Aitchison continued to play very good cricket. They failed, however, to keep up with the clock. At 4, after an hour's play, the score was 63 for 5 wickets. Then Rimell joined May and we had one of the most delightful exhibitions of batting. They ran everything they could, and the score went up to 130 in half an hour. Rimell was hitting the ball extremely hard, and May was batting in his usually perfect style. Rimell waited till 4.50 to declare, with May at 50 and the score 179.

Whitby and Perry opened the bowling and, though they failed to get either of the wickets, bowled very well. Rain intervened after Rimell had captured two wickets for one run.

CHARTERHOUSE v GRASSHOPPERS

At Home. June 23rd.

Drawn.

After a bad start, in which 3 wickets fell for 18 in ten minutes, Aitchison and Reiss settled down, and although the scoring was slow, Aitchison was batting very well and by lunch was 36 with the total at 65. Aitchison was out immediately after lunch and Reiss followed at once after a very useful innings. Rimell joined May and once again had another brilliant stand of over a hundred. Both were batting faultlessly and soon had the bowling, which had been accurate, completely under control. The innings was declared at tea with the total at 223. The Grasshoppers were given 2½ hours to get the runs, but after an hour's play were only 35. The bowling was extremely accurate and although 4 wickets fell fairly quickly, bad fielding, including five dropped catches, deprived Charterhouse of any hope of winning and the match petered out into rather a tame draw. For Grasshoppers' Forsdike batted very well.

The most obvious feature of this match was the extraordinary bad fielding by Charterhouse and it should have been made sufficiently clear by the Winchester XI that good fielding is vital if matches are to be won.

CHARTERHOUSE v M.C.C.

At Home. June 28th.

Drawn.

Despite rain, which prevented any play before lunch, the M.C.C. scored quickly at the beginning of their innings and after 30 minutes had scored 50. The wicket was at this time fairly tricky, but dropped catches helped the batsmen and the score reached 83 before the first wicket fell. The score mounted rapidly and though seven bowlers were tried, it was without success. Two wickets were eventually taken and the innings was declared at tea-time.

Aitchison and Raven set about the runs and managed to keep ahead of the clock. Aitchison was out at 55 and May followed at once. At 90 Raven was caught for a very good innings of 41 and with 50 minutes to go 70 runs were needed. Spargo was out after a useful 19, and 60 runs were needed in 35 minutes when Popplewell joined Rimell. Runs came quickly by good running, and when Rimell was out for 31 in the last over, Charterhouse were 18 runs short.

Once again bad fielding handicapped the bowlers, and in the last two matches at least 10 catches had been dropped.

CHARTERHOUSE v HARROW

Away. June 30th.

Won by 63 runs.

Having won the toss, Harrow sent Charterhouse in to bat on a slowish wicket. The weather looked ominous, but the experts said it would not rain before six o'clock.

Aitchison and Raven opened at 11.40 and by soon after twelve o'clock, thanks to some spirited batting by Raven and Spargo, the score was 29 for 2. It was gratifying to see that the Carthusians had sized up the situation and, in spite of some good in-swing bowling by Arnott, the score mounted fast. Spargo was out at 12.20 and May and Rimell began one of their profitable stands. They both played beautiful cricket and hit the ball very hard—which is needed if boundaries are to be scored on the peculiarly shaped Harrow ground. Lunch at one o'clock found them still together. They had scored 63 runs in forty minutes and the total was 104 for 3.

Arnott bowled Rimell at 120. This partnership of 80 runs had put Charterhouse into a strong position. May continued his innings, unperturbed by the loss of his captain, and made several perfect off-drives as well as two superbly timed late cuts. Yet he would not be tempted by Arnott's leg-trap. Meanwhile Popplewell was playing well at the other end, and the pair added another fifty runs. May was magnificently caught at silly mid-on by Blackwell, who stopped a very hard drive, juggled and finally held the ball.

Lynch, Prior, Reiss and Perry all failed, but Whitby batted in a refreshing manner and, at 3.15, Charterhouse were all out for 196 made in about 150 minutes—a creditable performance after being sent in to bat on a doubtful pitch with a slow outfield amid strange surroundings.

Harrow soon lost Blackwell and Wallis: but Garnett and Hyde-Thomson offered a stout defence against some excellent bowling by Perry, Whitby and Rimell. Perry bowled five accurate overs for four runs, Whitby four overs for seven runs and one wicket before being changed. When Hyde Thomson's wicket fell at 4.30, tea was taken with 49 runs on the board for three wickets.

During the interval, rain looked imminent and one or two drops did indeed fall, but play was resumed at the normal time. Perry took a wicket almost at once, and, later, Rimell took two quick wickets. And when Whitby bowled Day for a duck, Harrow were in an unenviable position, 75 for 7.

However, Thorne resisted nobly with Garnett, who, though invincible, was not aggressive enough to be dangerous. Then the Charterhouse fielding began to look ragged and tired. Rimell, although feeling the effects of the previous day's athletic activities, continued to bowl over after over and, at last, May caught Thorne on the boundary. Taking advantage of several missed catches, Arnott hit freely and the score mounted rapidly.

With the clouds drawing nearer as six o'clock approached, it looked as if Harrow might win or, at least, force a draw. But, after a change of ends, Rimell bowled Arnott, Whitby dismissed Tower and the match was won. Heavy rain fell five minutes later.

CHARTERHOUSE v OLD CARTHUSIANS

At Home. July 7th. Lost.

On an easy wicket, Aitchison and Raven opened against the bowling of Ashley and Bendit. Runs came quickly, especially from Raven, who drove Bendit for two fours, until Aitchison was bowled by a swinger from Ashley. Raven soon followed and a collapse set in. The score went from 15 for 1 to 29 for 4. Spargo, however, was still in and the bowling became fairly easy. Popplewell looked like staying with Spargo, who was driving the ball well, but at 47 Spargo was caught and bowled for an invaluable 20 and Popplewell was out next over. Except for some bright batting by Whitby and Perry, the rest of the innings was a dismal performance. The Old Carthusians had one over before lunch and afterwards set about getting the runs. Carter and Larking batted well and after the match was won, M. J. Rimell hit around. The Charterhouse fielding was very much better and few runs were given away. There was no excuse for the dreadful collapse, although the brilliant keeping of Powell was responsible for several wickets, but the bowling was considerably better and the team did very well to get such a powerful side out for 141.

CHARTERHOUSE v R.A.S.C.

At Home. July 21st. Drawn.

Charterhouse won the toss and though Aitchison and Raven scored runs, they did so very slowly and at 3.30 the score was only 42 with Raven out. Aitchison was out at 62 after a very good innings against accurate bowling. Short running by Popplewell and Lynch resulted in the latter being run out after batting well. Popplewell was bowled trying to score faster, and the side was out for 143. Set to get the runs in two hours, R.A.S.C. were very nearly all out. Whitby's bowling caused havoc and he finished with an analysis of 5 for 25 in nine overs.

FINAL

Weekites beat Robinites by 35 runs.

Weekites won the toss and elected to bat first. Two wickets fell quickly but Rimell joined Williams and they settled down to play steadily. Whitaker had Williams in difficulties, but Rimell treated the bowling with scant respect. At 25, having scored 12, Williams gave a chance to the wicket-keeper which, had it been taken, might have altered the result of the match. The score mounted rapidly and the bowlers were constantly changed. Byrt gave Rimell two overs which were played with great hesitation. The 100 went up and then 150, and then Williams, having got 50, was caught off Whitaker, and Rimell, having reached his century, gave Byrt a well-deserved wicket. Except for Jones, Weekites put up little more defence to Whitaker and Meyer and at 208 they declared, leaving Robinites 35 minutes' play.

By the end of the evening, Robinites had lost 4 wickets for 19 runs. Resuming the next day, Popplewell and Albu played a cautious game, scoring slowly until Albu was out at 47. Inigo-Jones joined Popplewell, who proceeded to keep the bowling entirely to himself by skilful stealing of runs. In this way runs came and Robinite position improved steadily. At 87 Rimell deceived Popplewell and had him caught and bowled. He had made a very useful 46. Vine and Inigo-Jones played out time. Next day, with the score at 105 for 7, these two continued to bat well, the latter especially driving Rimell several times. At 137 Vine was caught, and Inigo-Jones followed soon after for a very valuable 35. Meyer and Whitaker hit about but the end soon came and Robinites were all out for 169.

For the victors Rimell's large contribution should not go unnoticed. Besides making half the score, he took 7 wickets and caught two catches besides. William's innings was most valuable and he played well. Macdonald bowled steadily and supported Rimell well. For Robinites Popplewell and Inigo-Jones batted well, while Whitaker, Byrt and Meyer all bowled well in trying conditions. The fielding on both sides was good. Savill, in particular, fielded very well at cover. This was Weekites' first victory since 1932 and Robinites fifth appearance in the final in six years.

CRICKET, 1945

The last war-time eleven had a proud record and, in School matches, defeated Harrow, Wellington, Tonbridge and Bradfield, lost to Winchester and drew with Eton, a match which was abandoned because of rain.

Able led by Rimell, the side met with early success; for both Wellington and Tonbridge were beaten by eight wickets before the second week in June, and on June 9th Bradfield were overcome by another large margin. The bowling had such length, control and variety that most sides were dismissed easily and Rimell's difficulty (and anxiety!) was to give as many batsmen as possible a chance to show their mettle. When the earlier batsmen failed, Rimell and May became inevitable partners and almost invariably pulled the game round. However, Raven, Aitchison and Spargo gradually secured their places, the first two as all-rounders and the last as a batsman. With Popplewell as wicket-keeper and with Whitby and Perry as opening bowlers eight certain members of the side were collected. The other three, in spite of exhaustive trials, would not materialize, and in the end colours were awarded to Lynch, Le Bas and Prior, all useful fielders, and Harvey a promising all-rounder. The young players who were tried failed to do themselves justice, but they had valuable experience which should prove useful next year.

The bowling was again strong. Perry and Whitby could bowl fairly fast but, during this abnormally wet season, they rarely found a suitable pitch on which to bowl. However, on the few occasions when it was dry they took their quota of wickets. Rimell, on the other hand, revelling in the slower wickets, proved even more devastating than in previous seasons. In School matches he took six for 10 against both Wellington and Tonbridge, four for 38 at Bradfield and three for 32 against Winchester. Aitchison and Raven also bowled off-spinners, occasionally with success and always with control. Harvey and Le Bas could, if needed, bowl good-length, medium-pace swingers. Thus Rimell had six useful bowlers to call upon in addition to himself.

The batting depended too much on Rimell and May to be really convincing. While these two were extremely reliable, the other official batsmen failed frequently. Rimell played many a business-like innings and went from success to success. His sound yet forceful left-handed play made him the ideal partner for the elegant May, who had another brilliant season and whose natural skill was strengthened this year with experience. It was good to see him learning to place his leg-side shots, while Rimell taught him to run between the wickets. Their partnership against Bradfield, and later on against Harrow, will long be remembered by those present.

Both Raven, who developed into a good opening bat, and Aitchison, who watches the ball well, improved in style and confidence as the season progressed. Besides keeping wicket in good form, Popplewell was capable of playing a stylish innings at any time. Whitby, who likes wickets of Indian speed, did not find many pitches to his liking, but he performed well in the few spells of fine weather which occurred in July. Spargo played a number of effective innings and, on his day, looked like a first-class batsman. Lynch and Prior, though successful in May, failed to come up to expectations. Despite his peculiar style, Harvey made considerable headway during the season and became a useful member of the team, while Perry and Le Bas, given the opportunity, could hit the ball very hard.

The fielding of the side was sound and good without being brilliant. Rimell, May, Aitchison at cover, Harvey, Lynch and Le Bas were probably the best.

Rimell became an intelligent captain and an inspiring leader. Both he and May played at Lord's.

The outlook for 1946 is particularly rosy: six old colours, including Rimell, May, Whitby and Popplewell, hope to be here, and around such a nucleus it should be easy to build a strong peace-time eleven.

CHARTERHOUSE TOURING TEAM

v R. L. ARROWSMITH'S XI AT CHARTERHOUSE.

July 31st. Won by 44 runs.

Charterhouse batted first and although the wicket was easy, runs came slowly and by 12.15 the score was 30 for 4. Popplewell and Rimell took charge of the bowling and by lunch-time the score was 105—Popplewell 30, Rimell 28. After a lunch which was up to pre-war standard, a collapse set in owing to Robertson-Glasgow's accurate bowling and the score was 119 for 9. At this point Waddell (substitute for Perry) joined Harvey and attacked the bowling with great vigour. Runs came rapidly and they were not parted till the score was 191, with Waddell 40, Harvey not out 30. Rimell and Burt (in the absence of Whitby) began the bowling and, supported by Harvey, they got rid of the batsmen fairly regularly, though a last-wicket stand by Robertson-Glasgow looked dangerous.

v M. J. RIMELL'S XI AT OXFORD. August 1st

After journeys from various parts of the country, the full Charterhouse 1st XI assembled on the Trinity College ground to play a team of Old Carthusians at Oxford and members of Oxford Colleges. M. J. Rimell's team batted first and against very good bowling by Harvey were all out for 63, the highest score being 19. Aitchison and Raven, opening the innings for Charterhouse, faced Peters, who had bowled out Winchester with his fast swing bowling. The total was passed for the loss of 6 wickets, Aitchison playing an extraordinarily good innings of 37.

v WESTMINSTER AT LEATHERHEAD. August 2nd

The Charterhouse team, after leaving Oxford in the early hours of the morning, arrived without Whitby in time to begin at 12. Runs came quickly and it looked as if a mammoth total would be reached, but by carelessness and the pooriness of the pitch no one except for Aitchison (27) and May (47) got going. Facing a total of 140, Westminster soon lost wickets. Whitby, who had by this time arrived (having missed three connections), bowled devastatingly. Besides claiming five wickets, he succeeded in hitting the wicket-keeper in the eye so that he took no further part in the game. Shortly before six Westminster were all out for 63.
