

Of individual members mention should be made of G. R. W. Carter in goal, who played with great courage and, with rare lapses, with fine judgment and coolness; of D. J. L. Dix-Perkin, who finally found his true form and place at left-wing and was the most promising player of the season; and of P. K. Drury, who possesses the two qualities most required of a centre-half—ubiquity and solidity.

The 2nd XI (Captain, J. E. Powell-Jones) played four matches, winning one, whilst the Under XVI (Captain, T. D. Henshaw), who had little opportunity to play together as a team, lost the two matches they played.
